/hug welcomes volunteers from all levels of expertise and all contributions are valued.

examples of basic work that you can choose to perform for /hug include:

+) apply bandages to the wounded

+) protect characters of the opposite faction while fishing, hunting, or leveling +) giving money or items to those in need +) providing physical comfort to those in conflict by targeting a player from either faction and typing /hug.

volunteers with elite experience in the field are encouraged to participate in advanced missions such as providing translation, support in the field, and special aid operations as described on our website.

whether you are defending low leveled characters, gathering food to nourish the wounded, practicing expert first aid, or just providing a /hug - your service is recognized and honored throughout all realms.

to begin your orientation, please view the instructional and training videos as presented in our /hug theatre. afterwards please proceed to a fieldwork station and follow the on-screen World of Warcraft log in procedures. these procedures include selecting a pre-made character [or avatar] which you will inhabit in order to perform /hug missions. you may select characters from either of the World of Warcraft factions - horde or alliance. finally, select a specific mission card available near each fieldwork station. each card contains instructions regarding a particular mission and how best to accomplish it. please note the complexity of the mission and if your current skill-set matches the requested tasks.

if you require any assistance regarding the in-game navigation system, please follow these simple rules:

+) bring up the chat box by hitting the enter key. then type "/help" without the quotation marks and hit enter.

+) use the arrow keys to the left of this chat box to scroll through the help text presented there and view the commands/instructions you need.

once again we thank you for your commitment.
